locate the treasure, a submarine is brought into the story, and the divers who go in search of the treasure use the undersea boat as a rendezvous.

They are seen leaving the submarine, fighting their way through the later, and digging up the hidden treasure.

Mr. Ralph Ince became so interested in Mr. Williamson's new idea in motion picture photography that he not only agreed to direct the picture, but also to play the leading part.

It is seen in many thrilling episodes that seem to defy the laws of the imagination.

The last scene of the picture, the feminine role is taken by the beautiful Alene Hurst. Others in the cast include Charles McNaughton and John Burt.

FIGHTING SUBMARINE IN NEW PHOTOPLAY

"Wet Gold." Taken Under Water Shows Submarine Rising and Sinking

Those who have wondered how a submarine operates will have a chance to satisfy their curiosity when "Wet Gold," the motion picture of J. Ernest Williamson comes to the Empress Theatre next Friday and Saturday.

The picture, which is distributed by Goldwyn, discusses a submarine lying on the bottom of the ocean. The boat, which is one of the latest models, 150 feet long, was built specially for this photoplay.

Divers who have been hunting for treasure on the ocean floor, enter the scene by a trap door under the boat. This is done in the submarine, it is seen to rise. Another flash within the submarine shows the operation of the control lever.

Besides this close view of the submarine rising to the surface, "Wet Gold," shows thrillingly the firing of a torpedo. It is loaded into the chamber locked and the torpedo shot out while the boat is on the surface of the water.

But she'll always be glad that she spent her early girlhood developing her nearly perfect figure through the constant semi-play of the form, occasioned by women's fashions of to-day, there is a scene now and then requiring more than ordinary beauty "put it over."

T. Roy Barnes is the leading man and Clarence Badger the director of "Don't Get Personal."

Perfecting of Under-Water Photography Reveals Life Under Sea on the Screen

Science is daily unveiling the mysteries with which life is enshrouded. One of the most recent discoveries that has added to our growing stock of general knowledge is due to the perfecting of a device for photographing under water by Mr. J. Ernest Williamson, who has applied his knowledge in a remarkable photoplay, entitled "Wet Gold." This picture, which will be shown at the Empress Theatre for two days, beginning Wednesday next, reveals the actual struggle of men with the creatures of the sea. It was taken on the ocean floor of the Bahama Islands. The men are seen threading their way through the soft mud of the ocean bottom, in and out of beautiful coral and rock formations and avoiding the thousands of fish and other creatures that swim about them.

A Thrilling Adventure

All the under-water photography in "Wet Gold," which is being released through the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, forms part of a thrilling adventure story that begins on land, and involves a hunt for hidden treasure that a band of pirates has spirited away and buried in a cave in the bottom of the sea. laundry letter about the picture. The photoplay, which is distributed by Goldwyn, will be shown at the Empress Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Daniels' letter follows: "My dear Mr. Williamson—

I want to thank you for the pleasant entertainment afforded me and the efforts of the Navy Department in the showing of the new film, "Wet Gold."

Naturally, the Navy people were more concerned with that part of the picture which dealt with the submarine and divers than the rest of it. I found this place of your picture particularly interesting and attractive and have heard very favorable comments from some of the officers whose work deals directly with the Navy submarine.

Sincerely yours,
Signed JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

Red Cross Notes

Much interest is being evinced in the exhibit shown at Headquarters of the Red Cross Society, Calgary. Several hundred people who are interested in the health problems of their growing families have called at the office to obtain pamphlets and health literature.

During the past month the display of the exhibit was very popular. The exhibit, "The Road to Health," "Hygiene and Health," "Tuberculosis," "The large number of prospective mothers, many of whom were recent immigrants from the Old Country, expressed their appreciation of the gift of books on baby-care, which the Red Cross presented them with, one young Scotch girl remarking: "It is long since I was so far from my own mother at such a time, but I can now find a Red Cross Mother out here."

The various subjects included under the heading of Child welfare are written in popular style by medical experts and are of great assistance in the diseases of childhood, and can readily be understood by the mother of average intelligence. For the parent of more advanced thinking the Red Cross can supply a more detailed type of literature, or from its leading department can issue on loan the latest health brochure.

It is especially interesting to note the demand from school teachers, chiefly in the rural districts, for books on health instructions to be used in their lessons on hygiene. In many cases requests have come for parcels of health booklets for distribution amongst women's organizations, G. F. W. A., Women's Institutes, Ladies Aid, etc. These were readily granted and literature shipped to various parts of the province.

A feature of the Window Exhibit is the fine collection of photographs showing the activities of the Society at its various departments. The Junior Red Cross Hospital for sick children in Calgary is a striking series of striking scenes in the every day life of the

LOCAL & PERSONAL

D. Mackinlay, teacher at St. Paul's School, Macleod, who some years ago walked from Edmonton to Vancouver, has just returned from a walking tour to and back from Yellowstone Park, Wyoming. Mr. Mackinlay speaks in glowing terms of the scenic beauties of the park and reports having enjoyed the trip immensely.

Early Tuesday morning, September 12, at a large automobile, loaded with whiskey, was speeding along the road some seven miles west of Macleod and going east they came on a narrow, high grade, which with the rain that was falling made it very slippery. The car slid into the ditch, turning turtle. The wet goods in the car were scattered far and wide—one of the men escaped, the other was badly hurt, having among other injuries a broken hip. This injured man walked to J. A. White's for assistance and Dr. Kirk was on the ground in a few minutes. After giving relief to the injured man he took him to the hospital for attention. The man was later taken to Lethbridge, where his home is. Sergeant Caswell happened on the scene and found underneath the car and scattered along the road forty cases of whiskey done up in sacks, which he took charge of and has now under lock and key. The car which was a Hudson Super Six, was badly wrecked and is being repaired in a local garage.

At the unveiling of the monument on Monday, September 4, Rev. G. D. Armstrong in speaking, said: "Condemners of war and of power, the present occasion is one which calls for quiet reflection rather than for words. As we remember those whose services and sacrifice we commemorate today, we are reminded of the words of Rupert Brooke: 'These laid the world away—poured out their red, sweet wine of youth, gave up the years to be, of work and joy.' The granite monument we erect is but a symbol of the memory we cherish in our hearts. In vain we erect such tablets, unless we at the same time incarnate the spirit which they have manifested in our own lives. Eight years ago these men and others responded to the call to die for a cause. They went forth from us that the laws which hold the nations of the earth together, based on principles of eternal righteousness might be in honor. They went forth when the cause of freedom was assailed. Today the war drums thrum no more, the sword has been returned to its sheath. Let us pray, that yielding ourselves to the spiritual forces which are at work in the world we may so adjust our relationships one to the other that never again shall the peace of the world be disturbed by a world war. We must come to recognize that freedom does not consist in the absence of law, in the ability to act as individuals, or as nations solely to please ourselves. We are most free when we are most obedient to law. The men whom we honor today have laid aside the sword, not counting their lives dear unto themselves, but the cause for which they died still has its claims upon us. Our country calls and we must 'Carry on,' completing the work that remains to be done, not from a mere sense of duty, but having fulfilled in ourselves the work and 'joy' which they have given up, and realizing the joy made possible through their sacrifice."

Mr. Editor,—
The people of Allenfields' School wish to congratulate the officials of the School Fair on the splendid success they achieved in conducting the fair. Special mention must be made of R. J. E. ### THE GREEK DOWNFALL

The collapse of the Greek invasion of Asia Minor complicates considerably the extremely perplexing Near East situation. The Greeks began the war on the Turks in the hope that out of the wreck of the old Ottoman Empire, they could reclaim a large part of ancient Asian Greek territory. Constantine wanted to establish himself in the affections of the people by securing not only the Smyrna hinterland, but also by getting control of Constantinople, as a fruit of a strong military protective situation in Asia Minor.

If the Turks are able to drive the remnants of the Greek army back to the coast, and approach the Bosphorus in force, the Allies' situation in Constantinople will be none too comfortable. The number of troops there is about six thousand, of whom part are British, part French, and part Italian. The British have had the administration of the city, supported by British warships in the straits. The disposition of Constantinople is, therefore, a very open matter, and may be an important makeweight in the re-creating of the whole Near East situation. The elimination of Constantinople from Greece would clarify its considerably, because then Allied support could be given to Greece in its hour of distress. The natural buttress of Greek recovery would be a strong Greece, but the ever-ready and disastrous hegemony of Constantinople has almost wrecked that solution.

The holding of Constantinople in trust for civilization against the Turks is the only feasible, sensible policy. The agitation in Moslem possession belonging to Britain, France or Italy for restoration of the Sultan there will be out of it if firm front is shown. But if the Greek collapse leads to bargaining and manipulation of the whole Thrace and Asia Minor situation, the prolongation of uncertainty will have ill-effects for everybody. And now the Greeks ought to be checked up sharply if they press their advantage too far.

What shall I do with the money?

Many a holder of the Canadian Government bonds maturing December 1, 1922, has been asking this question. The advertisement of the Minister of Finance supplies an answer. The investor, by giving notice to the manager of any one of the branches of a chartered bank, can arrange to get new bonds bearing the same rate of interest, the highest possible security and a liberal rate of interest.

THE POOR OLD MAN

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"

"Over to Windsor, sir," she said.

"I have a tip hot from the stable, and I hope to win on Lazy Mabel."

"If I can crash her on the nose, I'll buy your ma some new silk hose."

"I weep for you, my pretty maid."

"Races are wrong," the old man said.

"They are the curse of every nation."

"That is, since I lost circulation."

"And now M. O. is on the bum."

"And the Hearst is yet to come."

"The world is wrong," the old man said.

"And I am right, my pretty maid."

"You shouldn't be with them poor fishes."

"But stay at home and wash the dishes."

"And then you can sit up and sew."

"And get your thrills by radio."

KLONDIKE GOLD RUSH HAS SILVER JUBILEE

Twenty-five years ago, July 17, occurred one of the most dramatic events in the history of the West—an event which profoundly influenced the history of the entire Pacific Coast from the Arctic Ocean southward. It was the arrival in Seattle of the steamer Portland bringing sixty-seven miners, each of whom carried ashore a "poke" of gold from the Klondike, a tributary of the Yukon just eight miles from the Pacific. That gold was material proof that rumors of the great strike made by Bill Carmack in the preceding summer were true, and created a stampede surpassing that of the California argonauts half a century earlier. Immediate effects were almost magical, not only in Seattle, but all along the Pacific Coast, and they were felt in the East and even in foreign countries. The free silver campaign of 1896 had turned the minds of the people to gold along with silver. Hosts of people were ready to grasp at a chance of bettering their shrunken fortunes. A vague belief prevailed that Alaska was a land of vast, untouched wealth, and it had been suggested by the sight of steadily increasing quantities of gold brought back from Forty-mile, near the Yukon, and by the rich gold developments around Juneau.

A New Land of Gold

In a day hard times were forgotten, all minds were on Alaska, which was regarded as a mere extension of the Klondike, and thousands set out, though the short North-West summer was nearing its end when they arrived. Dawson in a few months became a great, bustling city with all the comforts, good and bad, of a pioneer mining town. The north-bound stream grew in 1898 to a mighty flood, which narrowed to a thin but broken ribbon when it cleared the precipitous Chilkoot pass to the lakes which form the head waters of the Yukon. Every Pacific Coast port outfitted Klondikers and ran steamers to Skagway, Portland taking a hand with the old steamer Elsie. The flood of hungry manhood was made up of streams from all over the states. From down the Yukon and up every tributary. They landed farther west and penetrated the mighty Mount McKinley range. Many took the seat to St. Michael's and river steamers up the Yukon, and some of them traveled up the coast of Bering Sea to the Seward Peninsula. They found gold on the Manok, the Tanana, the Koyuk, Cook Inlet and in profusion in the bench sand at Nome, which supplied characters and plot for the Rex Beach's "Spiders." They also found much more—copper on the river of that name, coal in great beds in the mine fields, many streams of oil, broad fertile valleys where anything would grow and where 24-hour days compensated for short summers, and vast expansive grassy meadows where many thousands of cattle might fatten.

Respecting History

It seemed that the history of our Western States was to be repeated in Alaska—that the placer miner was to be followed by the lode miner, and by the seeker for baser metals and other minerals, they by the homesteader, farmer and cattlemen, for whom the future for Alaska that was foreseen by the Klondikers of 1897, on whose trail followed the steamers of 1898. Picture in the mind the immense process that was made in twenty-five years in California, in Montana, Idaho, Oregon and British Columbia from the early sixties, and we can realize that the hopes of the Alaskans were justified by experience in other frontier country. But a blight soon fell on the progress of the great North Land. The land laws developed popular country in the old world, not to a pioneer, almost uninhabited country in the far North, and the Government had to mine coal for locomotives which hauled trains without traffic on a railroad through a country bursting with riches which it forbade man to touch. Alaska still waits for the dead hand of Pinchot to be lifted.

Mismanagement That Killed

When demands for new land laws and for government in the North, instead of in Washington, finally won the attention of Congress, the cry for conservation also went up, and progress halted during a long struggle between those who would develop and those who would conserve to the point of sufficing enterprises. When the miner was no longer permitted to own what he had dug, the former forbade to keep what he had won, disheartened pioneers flocked back to the States, and population shrank back to the proportions of the days before the Klondike was discovered. Remorseful, but still absolute and ignorant, the Government built a railroad from the sea to the Tanana, but it would not permit production to make traffic for it. A law for leasing coal land was passed, but it was adapted to a well-developed popular country in the old world, not to a pioneer, almost uninhabited country in the far North, and the Government had to mine coal for locomotives which hauled trains without traffic on a railroad through a country bursting with riches which it forbade man to touch. Alaska still waits for the dead hand of Pinchot to be lifted.

St. Helena is now popular as a health resort. Not such a new use for it either, as in the first place Napoleon was sent there for the health of Europe.

"Mr. and Mrs. Van Splinter were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wood last week." Personal in weekly paper. No doubt when the ladies got talking over a cup of tea they made the chips fly.

Will Hays, who now runs the American movie business, says that the industry is in its swaddling clothes, and therefore cannot expect to have the polish of other industries. We were under the impression that there is something the matter but we did not know it was clothes. We rather imagined it was the lack of them.

FARMERS INSURE YOUR GRAIN

Owing to the frequency of Farm Fires, the attention of Farmers is especially drawn to the very low rates charged for insurance of grain whilst stored in barns or granaries. Also in stacks, wholly within 75 ft. of barns and granaries, but not within 100 feet of dwelling. The result of a year's work is often swept away in an hour, and every farmer should protect himself by carrying adequate fire insurance on his grains.

RATES ARE AS FOLLOWS PER $100 OF INSURANCE Covering in Specific Buildings

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmaturing coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered or coupon registered or coupon bearer, form, carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.
